

What Makes Fall Colors?

During the spring and summer months, leaves are filled with green chlorophyll. Chlorophyll is the green pigment in the plants that helps plants create energy.

The sun activates chlorophyll to make food in leaves.

In autumn, the weather cools and the leaves start to receive less sun.

When trees realize winter is about to begin, chlorophyll breaks down and other colorful pigments are revealed.